Fall 2022

Dear Colleagues:

At this time each year, we ask UNIVERSITY FACULTY members to recognize their outstanding colleagues by nominating them for one of the annual Faculty Senate Awards. Exceptional teaching, scholarship and service have long been recognized as the three primary foundations of an outstanding university. Now, more than any other time in our history, is a time to recognize and celebrate the distinguished accomplishments of our faculty.

The Senate has established three special annual awards explained in greater detail below, to recognize and foster excellence. Each of the awards has its own criteria, but a common requirement is good character. The awards are presented at a ceremony in the spring semester, followed by a reception.

We encourage you to submit electronic nominations to the Senate for any or all of these distinguished awards. Recipients are selected based on the results of a highly competitive peer-review process. The web addresses below provide nomination criteria and more detailed information regarding the awards.

The James W. McLamore Outstanding Service Award recognizes service by a member of the University community that is above and beyond the call of duty of their regular employment.
